We, the undersigns, visit Cape Hatteras, North Carolina every year, and every other year we come twice for a total of 3 weeks/year. You will note, for some of our group it's a busman's holiday, because they live on other coasts.

We come here because we value the protection the National Park Service gives the beach and all the living things on it. We see no reason why we should be accosted in parking lots by those who want to drive up and down the beach in the middle of the night.

Nor do we understand why the National Seashore has been re-named the National Seashore Recreational Area.

Granted, we may be exaggerating the opinions of those who met us at the Food Lion but we fish, we bird, and we see no reason for the hullabaloo. If it's economics that truly drives this behavior, they must not appreciate our dollars. Perhaps they should consider the down side of changing the status quo. Some of us may prefer other places.

Sincerely,

Abigail M. Robinson
