Cyndy,

I'm highly concerned about the NPS sending out this type of email with such seemingly biased information. Aside from the FWS and NMFS websites, who vetted the other websites to determine if they are unbiased? From my point of view, the other sites have strong advocacy undertones and NPS should not in any way be perceived as supporting one side over another. Reg Neg members can do their own research for their work on the committee.

Thank you,
Patty

There is a large amount of information available on the protected species within the Park on the internet. Because the information is so voluminous and broad in it's content, no attempt to identify all sources and documents is made. The following represents some key documents and search topics that can be queried using a search engine such as Google:

Piping Plover Recovery Plan
www.fws.gov/northeast/pipingplover/recplan/index.html

Sea Turtle Recovery Plans (specifically Loggerhead turtle recovery plan)
www.nmfs.noaa.gov/pr/recovery/plans.htm

American Oystercatcher
www.ncsu.edu/project/grsmgis/AMOY/Research.htm
You may also want to "google" american oystercatcher research. One document that will show up is "a Conservation Plan for the American Oystercatcher". Many other documents available.

Colonial Waterbirds

You may also want to "google" colonial waterbird research for many documents available.
