Yes, I was actually planning on that as well after looking at the individual beaches and seeing that some were not updated recently, mostly the beaches with fewer nests. CAHA was actually updated about 6 minutes before I looked at it.

Cheers,
 Spence

Probably also good to include in the footnote that there is sometimes a few days lag for entry of data in seaturtle.org so the numbers may not be completely up to date for a site on a particular day.

Lori,

Touched base with Matthew and he pointed me to the seaturtle.org website (same one where I got the SC data from last week) which is now a requirement for updating turtle data on in NC beginning this year. It also breaks the data down by species, at least for NC as a whole. So far 850 total turtle nests (822 of which are loggerheads) in NC.

So I will be able to use this data with a footnote that the nesting season is still ongoing.

Will put a call into Matthew today and should be able to get track-changed turtle/SBA stuff to you tomorrow.

Lori,

I actually have up-to-date 2009 turtle data from Matthew Godfrey, obtained it earlier this year for CALO write-up after CAHA was finalized for putting out to public.

I can call him though and find out about the 2010 numbers.

Time wise, probably at most 2 hrs if that.

Hey Spence,

Can you see what they are requesting for turtles here, and then let me know how much time you need to address this and more importantly, if you have time to make that call today?

Thanks,
Lori

Hi Lori,

Here are the text changes that Doug and I have accumulated. Note that the pages for sea turtles also include a request for LB to contact Mathew Godfrey (NCWRC) for some turtle info. Obviously these aren't all the changes that need to be made, just the one's we noticed, plus info that Britta gave us over the phone today about 2010 and birds/turtles.

Thanks.
