We are camped at Oregon Inlet and greatly enjoying our visit to this National Seashore. However, we were astonished and appalled by what we saw as we crested the dune to hike along the beach. Dozens, perhaps a hundred trucks and 4x4s all along the beach. How can allowing all these vehicles on the beach possibly be consistent with the Park Service mandate to protect our national treasures for future generations? And what about the turtles? With every species of sea turtle either threatened or endangered, how is it possible to prevent destruction of nests by truck traffic? I would welcome a reply Carl Greenbaum
